

RVSM, appears to be a good Idea. Implementation will cost $ both to the airlines and the FAA. However that cost should be recouped over time by savings in fuel and public desire for shorter flight durations on long haul flights. Which would translate into increased passenger loads for airlines that were able to offer shorter flight times form point A to point B.